POISONED AT LITTLE LOT.

Mrs. Andrew Parker Took a Drink of Whiskey, and Died an Hour Later. CENTREVILLE, July 19.—Mrs. Andrew Parker, one of the most prominent ladies of the Little Lot neighborhood, two miles east of here, was poisoned yesterday morning and died from the effects in less than one hour from the time she took it. She took a small drink of whisky upon rising that morning, and it was in this way that she received the poison. The whiskey had just been received from Nashville, and no information could be given as to how the poison got into the whiskey.

Pain as a Friend.

Pain is a friend rather than a foe. It stands between extremes of life and death, calling us ever toward life. It ceases when its warning has stirred the soul to thought and remedy, and brought back health, or it ceases when the battle is lost. Like a fire-bell, it stops when the fire is put out or burned out. Let us not resent it. It has a kind heart, though its hands hurt. An engineer does not like to see a red flag, and yet he is only too glad to see it. That we may know the truth, and so be made free from ignorance and peril, is part of the mission of pain.—Sunday School Times.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

The best remedy for an injury is forgetfulness. Wise men are wrong much oftener than fools are right. Women in politics are about as graceful as hens in swimming. Never run a policeman down when out for a spin on your wheel. No amount of culture will make a man stop snoring in his sleep. A man of letters has but little show in a breach of promise case. No man who paints his nose ought to kick if his wife paints her cheeks. The worst that can be said of little vices is that they won't stay little. A woman likes to be told how pretty she is and how homely some other women are. The wisest individual who is induced to bet on a sure thing always holds out enough coin to pay his carfare home after it happens.—Chicago Evening News.

Only a Question of Time.

The interesting young man who smoked 300 cigarettes in twenty-four hours, or at the rate of one every five minutes, after which noble feat he tried to kill his father and mother, is in a strait jacket in a New York hospital. The hospital is where the rest of his brethren who in excess take nicotine into their lungs and circulate it through their blood, will find it. It is only a question of time. —Nashville American.

AN UNMARKED GRAVE.

None Know Where the Remains of John Paul Jones Rest.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Inquiry was recently made at the State Department in regard to the grave of John Paul Jones, the great naval hero of Revolutionary days, who died in Paris July 18, 1782. He was buried there with the highest honors by the French Government, but it appears that the present location of his grave is not known.

The Secretary of State recently addressed a letter to Henry Vignaud of the United States Embassy in Paris, asking whether the grave of John Paul Jones in Paris is known and marked. He has received a reply from Mr. Vignaud, saying that although he has made earnest and frequent inquiries of the city authorities in regard to the matter, he has been unable to discover the whereabouts of the grave. One thing established by his inquiries, however, he says, is that John Paul Jones was not buried in the cemetery where the remains of Lafayette lie, as has been supposed by some people. In another quarter it is intimated that, owing to a custom prevailing in Paris, the remains of John Paul Jones were deposited in a rented grave for a term of years, and that, upon the expiration of the lease a great many years ago, the bones of this distinguished American patriot were thrown into the potter's field.

THE KISSING BUG.

View of the American Medical Journal—Several Kinds of Bugs.

CHICAGO, July 16.—The American Medical Journal publishes the following on the work of the "kissing-bug."

"It is hardly probable that we have any general exaggeration of the frequency of any one species, though there may be a local increase. Cases of painful stings or bites during sleep are not uncommon. We have nearly all of us experienced them or observed their effects, but any ordinary or extraordinary event of the kind just now is credited to the 'kissing-bug.'"

"The probability that it is the species referred to by the Philadelphia correspondent (Opisacus personatus) or some allied one of the family, is the greater, as that insect is a well-known infester of dwellings, and its bite is sufficiently painful and serious to meet the descriptions. Other species, however, may be implicated; several of the water bugs, Notonecta and Belostoma, are said to be poisonous, and there is a possibility that the electric light, so general in our towns and villages, may attract them in unaccustomed numbers so as to render more frequent the accidents of their bites."

"For the most part, however, we think the present epidemic of 'kissing-bug,' except, perhaps, locally on our Eastern border, is largely a matter of the imagination."

Luck Was Against Him.

A sturdy old Boer farmer living in the Orange Free State has a shrewd wife who has long rendered his life anything but a couch of roses. One day not long ago she, in a fit of pique, packed up her goods and left him, vowing never to come back. The news went around among the neighbors and at night several of them came to console with him. He sat on his front porch, puffing away at his pipe.

"Han," remarked one of his neighbors, "I pity you."

"My poy," replied the honest Dutchman, as he distastefully knocked the ashes out of his pipe, "you was right. She has shust come back."

Some Marriages in the Philippines.

The negroes have a curious marriage custom. When a young man makes known his preference, the young woman flees from him, while he gives chase and catches her in his arms. She struggles and frees herself, whereupon the chase is renewed, and so on until he has caught her the third time, when she yields, and he proudly leads her back to her father's dwelling. The father and mother of the bride-elect then meet with the contracting parties, the latter kneeling side by side. The father then takes some water in a coconut shell and throws it over them. Continuing the ceremony, he takes each by the neck and bumps their heads together several times, and they are then adjudged to be duly married. A wedding tour of five days' sojourn alone in the mountains follows, after which they take up their abode as staid citizens among their friends.—From "A Sketch of the Philippines" in Self Culture for July.
